Pteridophytes, also known as "vascular cryptogams" and "ferns and fern allies", comprise about 12,000 species of vascular plants that do not produce flowers or seeds, reproducing instead via the production of spores. Pteridophytes occur in most terrestrial habitats on earth and are also present in some aquatic communities.

Pteridophytes are very abundant. Pteridophytes are one of the oldest land plant groups on earth and constitute a vast group of vascular cryptogams. The position of the Pteridophytes as intermediate between the lower cryptogams and higher vascular plants has made the group fascinating. Pteridophytes have a long geological history on our planet.
